THE BURIAL OF MOSES.

The following lines were written years ago by an unknown poet, and first appeared in into the great, great sun: " And he buried him in a valley, in the

and of Moab, over against Beth-peor; but no man knoweth of his sepulchre date this day." [Deut. xxxiv : 6. By Nubo's lonely mountain, On this side of Jordan's wave, In a vale in the land of Mosh, There lies a lonely grave; And no man dug the sepulchrs,

And no man saw it e'er, For the angels of God upturned the sod, And laid the dead man there. That was the grandest funeral, That ever passed on earth, But no man heard the tramping, Or saw the train go forth; Wolseless as the daylight Comes when the night is done,

And the crimson strenk on ocean's cheek Grows into the great, great sun. Noiseless as the springtime. Her crown of verdure weaves, And all the trees on atl the hills Open their thousand leaves; So, without sound of music,

Or voice of them that wept, dently drown from the mountain's crown, The great procession swept. Perchance the bald old sagle On gray Beth-peor's height, Out of his rooky eyric. Look'd on the wondrous eight; Perchance the lien stalking,

Still shuns that hallowed spot, For beast and bird have seen and heard That which man knoweth not. But when the warrier dieth, His comrades in the war, With arms reversed, and muffled drum, Follow the funeral car: They show the banner taken,

They tell his battles won, And after him lead his masterless steed, While peals the minute gun. Amid the noblest of the land, Mon lay the sage to rest, And give the hard an honor'd grave,

With costly marble dress'd; In the great minister's transept, Where lights like glories fall, And the choir sings and the organ rings, Along the emblaconed wall.

This was the bravert warrior That ever buckled sword, This the most gifted post That ever breathed a word; And never earth's philosopher Traced with his golden peu, On the deathless page, truth half so sage, As he wrote down for men,

And had he not high bener? The hill side for his pall, To lie in state while angels wait, With stars for tapers tail? And the dark pines like toming plumes Over his bier to wave, And God's own hand, in that lonely land, To lay him in the grave,

That deep grave without a name, Whence his uncoffin'd clay, Shall break again-most wondrous tho't! Before the judgment day; And stand with glory wrapt around, On the hill he never trod, And speak of the strife that won our life With the incarnate Son of God.

O lonely tomb in Mosh's land! O dark Beth-peer's hill! Speak to these carious hearts of curs, God hath his mysteries of grace, Ways that we cannot tell. He hides them deep like sacred sleep, Of him he level so well.
